Royal caribbean international ship reviews

Tired of getting stuck in an indoor cabin because it's the only cabin class you can afford? You may be interested in selling a limited-time upgrade to Royal Caribbean. Until March 24 (this is Friday, folks), you can upgrade from an interior to an oceanview cabin for $99 per person, or upgrade from ocean views to a balcony cabin for $49 per person. This offer is available on selected Caribbean routes between August 6 and December 17. Some of the routes ready for upgrade take place during the hurricane season and the low Caribbean season, but cruise ships can easily change course to avoid bad weather and are unlikely to experience seven days of continuous rain on the islands. If you've ever dreamed of a cabin with natural lighting, or better yet, a private terrace, a $49 or $99 upgrade is an affordable way to realize your desires. We manually select everything we recommend and select objects through tests and reviews. Some products are sent to us free of charge without incentive to offer a favorable review. We offer our impartial views and do not accept compensation for product review. All items are in inventory and the prices are accurate at the time of publication. And if you're in the mood for a workout, you can always hit the gym where you'll find lots of classes (yoga, tai chi) to help you burn the buff. Of the 2,091 cabins on board, 1,572 have balconies. All 375 interior cabins feature a virtual balcony, a floor-to-ceiling HD display that creates the illusion of a terrace overlooking the sea. The cabins are positioned to maximize space, and sizes range from 101 square feet for a studio, or solo cabin, to the 1,640-square-foot two-deck Royal Loft Suite, which has three balconies, two of which have a hot tub. There are also a number of family cabins, some with folding sofas and others with two bedrooms. Family junior suites—three different cabins of different sizes connected through an antechamber—are ideal for larger families and groups of many generations. They can accommodate up to 10 and have balconies connecting. At bionic bar, robot weapons mix cocktails for passengers, who order their choice via tablet. And at Two70, a high-rise café and observation room that turns into a high-tech theater at night, there are six dancing Roboscreens, HD screens that rotate and interact with artists at cabaret spectra, a multimedia music and dance performance. As for these 270-degree windows? They act as huge super-HD displays, which serve as a digital backdrop for performance. Start at the SeaPlex, the largest indoor activity area at sea, which has bumper cars, rollerskating, basketball, and even a circus school. Outside, there's a climbing wall and a FlowRider, a 40-foot-long surfing simulator. If you're feeling brave, try, Tried, Ifly, the ship's skydiving simulator, or hop on the North Star, a glass-in capsule with a 360-degree view that takes passengers 300 feet above sea level. For something more casual, snuck on Chilean chicken wings and peanut butter pie-in-a-jar at James Beard Award winner Michael Schwartz's gastropub, Michael's Genuine Pub (à la carte). Or take the kids out for beef noodle bowls at the kung fu panda noodle shop by the pool. Curious about molecular gastronomy? Each person made us feel welcome and appreciated. It was an amazing experience and I would highly recommend Royal Caribbean. The tours were top notch, very fun and a great adventure! The only negative was that we bought an indoor cabin and there was a column at the end of the bed, so I couldn't walk around the bed to get in, but we weren't in the room at the end of the bed, so I feel that for the services you get the prices are good! I find the prices on excursions (especially in Europe) can be a bit expensive, but the tours are mostly informative and amazing. The food is great. You visit many locations without having to change hotels or pack and unpack. I like cruises so much that I've been to 29 of them. The best cruise line is Royal Caribbean International since on their ships there are activities for everyone, no matter your age, nationality, nationality, education, etc. Once you board one of their ships you are in a different world where you are treated like kings and every crew member is there to make your holiday a dream come true. The company has many categories of ships and each category is different and has its own way of enchanting its visitors. That's why you can say that there is a ship and a category for everyone and every taste. Another thing I find very important and have found true on every ship is cleanliness. During a day, wherever you look there is a cleaning crew member of the various areas with a smile on their face. Once you try a cruise on any of RC's ships you will definitely want more and will say I am loyal to the Royal. Read Denver's full April review, CO Verified Review Home review: April 1, 2020They cruise 3 different lines (NCL, Carnival, & RCCL), and among all will continue to cruise RCCL over and over again. The entertainment on these ships (especially the Oasis and Quantum/Quantum-Ultra classes) is spectacular. From excellent live performances, to comedic performances, laser-tags, ice skating + ice shows, bumper cars, escape rooms, you can call it! They have entertainment to match every and all types. The rooms are incredibly comfortable, and the higher you go in the cabin category, the more exceptional the Suite Privileges experience becomes. Even larger ships like the Oasis class don't feel crowded as you'd expect. The layout of larger ships keeps you from feeling cramped in. The ship's activities abound every day. There is Something for everyone. If I had to suggest an area of improvement, I'd have to choose the food. The buffet food is ok, and the main dining room food is a little better. The special dining rooms are wonderful, but there is an up-charge for them. The quality of the food options included in the cruise fare could stand some improvement. However, with all the other things that RCCL provide, I will continue to sail with them, despite this, as in my humble opinion, still ranked the best so Read Christine's full review of Ashland, VA Verified Reviewer Original review: March 30, 2020RC really knows how to pamper their guests. Overall, if you want to have fun, enjoy great food and explore different parts of the world, I recommend at Royal Caribbean Maria of Eileess, TX Verified Reviewer Home review: July 28, 2020After all the absolute nightmare I've experienced dealing with royal caribbean's customer service department, I will never book another cruise with them. I had planned to take a cruise with 3 of my friends in the week of March 15, 2020. We were concerned about the safety of the cruise after the outbreak of the COVID-19 pandemic, so we consulted what the health experts were saying. After the CDC and the State Department both released guidelines telling American tourists not to get on cruise ships after hearing that all ports in the Bahamas had been closed, and after seeing several ships quarantined, we decided to approach Royal Caribbean to cancel. This was Monday/Tuesday before our cruise had to sail, and I would further note that when we looked at our Sail Pass, we still hadn't been assigned a room, which tells me that they knew very well that they weren't going to be able to sail that next Sunday. When we called to cancel, we were told we had to do a cruise with a certificate of trust good by the end of 2021. Not knowing then how widespread that pandemic would be, we agreed. A few days later, our cruise was cancelled by the cruise line and all these passengers had the choice between a refund or the Cruise with Trust program offered to us. To be clear, my cruise week was the first week of cancellations on all cruise lines. Each subsequent week was given to the two options. Fast forward a few weeks ago, regrouped regroup my friends, and with prospects looking bleak for travel, even next year, not knowing when the vaccine will be ready or when it will be safe to travel, I decided to call Royal Caribbean to see if I could get us a refund for our cruise certificates. I'd heard they were giving full refunds now, and on top of that in live in exceptional circumstances, and our cruise was in that first week of cancellations when things were so hectic. We were hoping to get the money back, especially for parts of our team that have been financially affected by the pandemic, and regroup to reschedule the cruise as soon as we knew for sure things would be safe (We thought this would probably be in 2022). In addition, we took a look at the cruises sold for 2021, and most if not all cruises are more expensive and prices were climbing. If we were to use cruise certificates, which are supposed to help us reprogram seamlessly at no extra cost, we would end up having to put even more money into the cruise more than we've already spent. With all this in mind, when I called I was hoping to talk to a representative or a manager so I could explain our unique situation (since we were in this short time between the instructions posted and the cruise being cancelled, so we weren't providing the same options the rest of the passengers were. to a manager. After calling several times, I was able to get two service requests and was told that I would like to speak to an administrator soon. Instead, the cases were handled by the business customer service team, who also refused to let me talk to an administrator or escalate my complaint. It was very condescending and told me that since I followed CDC and State Department guidelines and made the initial cancellation, I didn't want to cruise badly enough with Royal Caribbean and therefore didn't deserve a full refund of my money. Remember, my cancellation and the cancellation of the cruise were a few days apart. We live through extraordinary circumstances, and my situation could only be applied to a handful of people who had cruises in the week of March 15, 2020. I was told all sorts of things about how impossible a refund would be, although I have worked extensively in customer service and know that there is always an escalation process and a way to get your money back. They refused to give email addresses, refused to transfer me to an administrator, and insisted that the only thing I would do to do was to give me a general email where I could give them 'feedback' What, exactly, does this help anyone with if you refuse to listen to the comments I give in real time? If you refuse to help your customers, how will providing feedback change this situation at all? I would be happy to re-book in 2022 or later. If the cruise had sailed after we canceled, I, I. have never called customer service at all. However, we are in the midst of an unprecedented pandemic, the cruise was completely cancelled a matter of days after our initial call to Royal Caribbean, and now we are stuck with cruise credits that are not worth the same amount as they were because all cruise prices have jumped. I don't usually ask for refunds in situations like this, because we all know what we're signed up for, but these are unprecedented times and I can't believe that my group is being kicked out of all of this because we chose to follow the federal health guidelines published at this point. I know other cruise lines haven't given their customers almost the same amount of grief that I see other people dealing with because they know the value of good customer service and keeping their brand intact. I still disagree with Royal Caribbean now, and even with all the reviews, even after all the calls and trying to get someone to listen to our situation, they refuse to listen. Never in my life have I dealt with a customer service department that categorically refuses to help people, especially in the midst of a pandemic. In conclusion, after all these headaches, I will never board a Royal Caribbean cruise again, and I tell every person I know about their utter lack of compassion and understanding during these difficult times. They say that a company's response during COVID-19 is really indicative of their character, and all I have to say is that Royal Caribbean is very lacking in it. I would now only cruise with Disney Cruise Lines, because I can expect Disney guest service to go above and beyond to help in any situation possible. I'd really like anyone thinking of going on a cruise after this pandemic is over to think twice before booking a Royal Caribbean cruise, because they're definitely not going to do us any favors, and from the looks of critics I see everywhere, they've left a lot of people hanging up and dry when it comes to returns. Read Nancy's full review of Mount Joy, PA Verified Reviewer Original review: July 15, 2020Long story, but the bottom line is, that in the middle of a pandemic, you declare you will credit your deposits but then keep deposits and no credits are given. It will also put you on hold forever and don't respond directly, but put you in their resource section. They then refuse to disclose the summaries of their employees so you can keep track of the right people. If you cruise with them and there is another pandemic or another crisis, You're going to lose.
